

ORLANDY AND HEAD WIN SUPERIOR COURT RACE; WILLIAMS WITH THEM

Two Incumbents and Philadelphia Aspirant Each Receive More Than Half of Total Vote

PENROSE KEEPS STATE

Only One Place Won by Organization's Foes in Pittsburgh—State Vote Light

Partial returns from all parts of the State make it virtually certain that Judge George B. Orlandy and John H. Head, incumbents, and J. Henry Williams, of Philadelphia, will be unopposed for election to the Superior Court bench in November. Indications are that each received more than 50 per cent of the total vote. Friends of former Judge W. D. Wallace, of Lawrence County, are still declaring that he is in the race, however, and are waiting for the official figures.

The Penrose Organization made a clean sweep in Allegheny County. J. Denny O'Neill and R. F. Smith, running openly as anti-Penrose candidates, lost the Republican nomination for commissioners by about 2000 each. The only place the anti-Penrose people got on the Republican ticket was that of Registrar of Wills.

Local and county contests overlapped the only State-wide contest, that for Superior Court judges, in nearly every county. In nearly every county the vote was light.

G. O. P. CHESTER VICTORY.

The Republicans claim a victory in Chester County. An unofficial count on the judgeship gives Gawthrop, Republican, 2600; Mather, Democrat, 2100; Arthur T. Park, Republican, 2500. The Republicans lost the nominations for County Commissioners to David Golder and John Baldwin and that for Register to Howard Conner. Isaac T. Ash, County Comptroller, claims the nomination for re-election by a plurality of six votes over Groff.

W. L. W. Jones, backed by the Werlins and the Rev. T. W. McKinney, who has the support of the Hustons, will go on the ballot for Mayor of Coatesville. Jones and McKinney were the high men on a nonpartisan ballot at the primary.

MEALS HARRISBURG VICTOR.

In Harrisburg, E. S. Meals, former Mayor, received more than 50 per cent of the votes cast, and his will be the only name on the mayoralty ballot in November. He received 6600 votes, 2000 more than J. E. Sheesley, who was next highest.

The Republican Organization county ticket won in Lancaster by 800. In the city of Lancaster Mayor H. L. Trout is renominated by the Democrats. Democrat nominated Dr. M. L. Chadman for Mayor and D. F. Magee and Amos B. Hess for County Commissioners.

A. L. Reichenbach, for 25 years City Treasurer, was elected Mayor of Allentown at the primaries. He received about 50 per cent of the total vote cast.

The Republican Organization candidate for Commissioner, Dr. Lewis P. Edwards, was defeated in Luzerne County by William C. Brenton, who ran on an anti-Organization platform. Brenton was high man in a field of seven, and has Alvin Belsel, backed by Roderick, as his running mate.

In Wyoming County the "wets" and "drys" each nominated a candidate for Judge. Judge Terry, representing the "drys," and Ed Mullin, representing the high vote. The "wets" and "drys" also split even in Tioga County.

Mayor John V. Kosek was re-elected Mayor of Wilkes-Barre, receiving more than half of the total vote. In York two candidates will fight it out for Mayor at the general election in November. E. B. Hugenutzer and Felix S. Bentzel are the candidates.

HELD FOR "SHOOTING" WOMAN

"Revolver." However, Contained Nothing More Dangerous Than Water

A weapon which looks like a deadly revolver, but which contained nothing more harmful than water, got a youth into trouble this afternoon when he carried it in his pocket. The boy, who was arrested at the Reading Terminal, is 15 years old. He is Abraham Kramer, 15 years old, of 428 Dickinson street. He was sent to the House of Detention pending an investigation.

Kramer was accused of having squirted water into the face of Mrs. May Burk, of Collingswood, N. J., as she was passing the Reading Terminal. Mrs. Burk said she did not believe the pistol contained water, for her eyes burned her, and she said she was convinced that it had been loaded with some stronger substance.

FAIL TO FIND BODY

Search for Remains of Swimmer Drowned in Delaware

Search for the body of Joseph Anzorola, of 328 Mountain street, who was drowned in the Delaware River last Sunday morning off National Park, N. J., is still going on, but so far the body has not been recovered.

Angarois and a number of companions went to the pleasure park to spend the day and decided to go in swimming. When some distance from the shore Anzorola suddenly threw up his hands and went under. None of his companions could swim, and by the time help arrived the young man had disappeared.

Girl's Father Pleads for Her

An effort by James H. Redmond, of Baltimore, to have his 13-year-old daughter, Louise, returned to the St. Vincent de Paul Society, of Baltimore, from the home of her mother, Mrs. Laura Redmond, of 1215 North 2nd street, was heard up today by Judge Brown in the Municipal Court, pending investigation of charges of impropriety at the mother's home. The girl said she did not want to return to Baltimore, because she was required to work for relatives of her father, who did not pay her for her services. She came to this city two weeks ago.

Want "Soft Pedal" for Milkmen

Residents of Gratz street, above Montgomery avenue, brought equity proceedings in Court of Common Pleas No. 1, today, in an endeavor to have Clayton H. Howard, B. Jones, milk dealers, evicted from their homes, conduct their business more quietly. The complainants say a steam engine exhaust is turned on at 7 o'clock every morning, after which there is a continual racket of shouting and rattling milk pails until after daylight.

Arrested While Asleep in Theatre

Frank Pitts, a 13-year-old negro, of 1802 Nicholas street, was found asleep in a moving picture theatre, at 180 Columbia avenue early today by Police Officer Bowman, of the 19th and Oxford streets. Officer Bowman, who had been held the man under $1000 bail for a further hearing on Monday as he was unable to explain his presence in the theatre.

REFORM BODY BACKS PORTER FOR MAYOR

cast their ballots on November 2 against a return to Organization domination.

SMITH RECEIVED 120,000. Smith received a total of 117,139 votes, as against 41,234 for Porter on all tickets. The total vote cast was 158,373. The Republican organization polled 87 per cent of the full strength at the primary. The independent leaders see in the returns every reason for encouragement. With a big part of the 20,000 Republican votes and the 20,000 who were turned back at the polls when they closed Tuesday evening, added to the independent strength, the independents feel that they will have little trouble in bringing out enough other votes to overcome the lead which Thomas B. Smith had over Porter at the primary.

AS IN 1911

Comparison of the vote cast by the independents and the Republicans this year with that of 1911, shows almost the same conditions. In 1911, when Blankenburg was elected Mayor, the following vote was received: Republicans, 106,453; Democrats, 10,564.

The total number of votes received by Porter in almost the same as the vote Blankenburg received in the primary. The Republican Organization vote this year fell off 70,000 from that cast in the primary four years ago. In 1911, the following primary vote was as follows: Early, 106,453; Vane, 82,236.

Total, 187,711. Thomas B. Smith received only 116,747 votes, which is 70,964 less than the combined Early-Vane vote.

The efforts of the Committee of One Hundred will be confined to an active campaign to get the 113,000 registered voters who did not vote on Tuesday to the polls in November.

PORTER INDORSED

With the returns from the final scattering divisions in the 43d Ward it was found that Director Porter's total vote on the three tickets, the first six in order of the cast for Smith, Porter on the three tickets received a total of 233 votes, while Smith's total was 231.

The Public Service Committee of One Hundred formally indorsed Porter at a meeting yesterday. Last night the committee issued a statement expressing the conviction that the campaign against the Organization bosses will be successful this year. The statement said:

"The Public Service Committee of One Hundred is gratified at the proof that the sentiment for good government in Philadelphia, so far from being dead or discouraged, is very much alive.

"The committee enters upon the campaign for Mr. Porter's election for Mayor in a cheerful and confident mood, with the conviction that the campaign will be successful. Four years ago the Organization polled 155,000 votes in the primary and 120,000 at the general election. At that time the independent vote amounted to 42,000 at the primaries and rose to 134,000 at the general election. It appears at this writing that the Organization vote will not likely be much in excess of 120,000, while the independent vote is in excess of 60,000. In other words, compared with four years ago, the independent vote has increased by 40,000, while the Organization vote has decreased by 35,000. There is, therefore, every reason to believe that Mr. Porter's majority this year will be very much larger than Mr. Blankenburg's was in 1911.

"The Committee of One Hundred will organize at once the various committees necessary to conduct the most vigorous sort of a campaign. Its task will be comparatively easy, because the public is informed upon the issues. The black record of the Organization and its countermanic tools has been in evidence for four years.

"Volunteers are rallying to the banner in every ward and division, and all that will be necessary will be to organize the force of good government and give them the opportunity to express themselves at the polls on the day of the general election.

JUDICIARY VOTE.

The nomination for the judiciary on the nonpartisan ballot were as follows: Superior Court (Philadelphia only)—Judge John B. Head, 95,961; Judge George B. Orlandy, 98,531; J. Henry Williams, 108,944.

Court of Common Pleas No. 1 (one vacancy)—Judge William H. Shoemaker, 106,350.

Court of Common Pleas No. 2 (two vacancies)—Joseph P. Rogers, 77,354; Henry W. Weiser, 57,706; Michael J. Ryan, 37,539; Judge D. Webster Dougherty, 15,370; Frederick S. Drake, 15,304.

Court of Common Pleas No. 4 (one vacancy)—Judge Thomas D. Finletter, 115,287.

Orphans' Court (one vacancy)—Judge Morris Dallett, 40,634; George McCurdy, 46,525.

MUNICIPAL COURT (one vacancy)—Judge Raymond MacNellie, 95,327.

HELD FOR ELECTION FRAUD

Two Republican Officials Accused of Registering Absent Voter

Two Republican election officers, accused of falsely registering a negro voter while the voter was sick in bed, were held today under $500 bail for court by Magistrate Penneck, in the Central Police Station. They are William Loughran, of 1214 Catharine street, a Republican watcher, and William Green, of 1231 Webster street, a Republican registrar and tax collector, both of the 17th division of the 3d Ward.

The man who says he was registered falsely is Joseph Nixon, of 1229 Christian street. His wife testified that he was sick in bed September 7, the day on which Cyrus A. Peters, of 824 South 12th street, a Washington party registrar, said he saw a negro being taken into the polling place by Loughran and Green. Walter Mason, of 1232 Catharine street, testified that he recognized with them that the man was not Nixon and that they replied it made slight difference.

REPUBLICANS HOLD JUBILEE

Reception Planned by Club to Organization's Candidates

The Young Republicans of Philadelphia held a jubilation meeting last night at their clubhouse, 231 South Broad street, to celebrate the nomination of the Organization candidates. The entire ticket was indorsed. A campaign committee will be announced, headed by the following:

Charles E. Bartlett, chairman; Philip H. Johnson, William C. Brown, Charles H. Fox and P. Raymond Wadsworth, vice chairmen; Francis Theodore Albright, Samuel B. Gayton, Charles Henry Metz and Neville J. Rowand, secretaries, and John C. Lindsay, treasurer.

PORTER GOES AWAY TO REST

Ex-Director to Remain at Medford, N. J., Until Monday

George D. Porter left this city this afternoon to enjoy a few days' camping near Medford, N. J. He will not return to Philadelphia until Monday. The ex-Director of Public Safety said he was very tired after the election yesterday, and that he is suffering from a "throat cold."

PORTER FIRES FIRST BROADSIDE AT SMITH IN VARE STRONGHOLD

Independents' Candidate Assails Machine at "Bloody Pit" Hall—Gets Enthusiastic Reception

HIS SHOT HITS TARGET

By M'LISS

Ask anybody in the 30th Ward where you can find Wharton Hall and he will scratch his head ruminating, look dubious and murmur vaguely, "Wharton Hall, Wharton Hall, um—ah, oh, yes, you mean the 'Bloody Pit.'"

Ostensibly Wharton Hall is a place where the swains and maidens of the neighborhood assemble to trip on their light fantastic toes, but the past history of the place testifies to the fact that more often than not Terpsichore is chased out before the evening has waned by the pugnacious war and Mars.

The "Bloody Pit" has been the scene of many a sanguinary affair, this being the place where a man is proud of his fat work; but the dove of peace quitted there last night and the fat, little cupid painted in trios around the wall whithered to each other that never before had the "Pit" witnessed such a scene of harmony and good will.

It was in the "Pit" that George D. Porter, erstwhile monitor of the public safety in Philadelphia, elected to fire the first gun in the strenuous five weeks' campaign which is to precede the election. The "Pit" is a room in the middle of the Vane downtown stronghold.

Like a conquering hero fresh from the triumphs of the battlefield, Mr. Porter entered the hall and the 400 citizens assembled rose to their feet and cheered with a vigor and enthusiasm that completely drowned the efforts of an energetic gentleman who was tickling the ivy of the hall's pipe.

All kinds of oratory was rampant, from the flowery effusions of Frank A. Kammerad, who looks like Daniel Webster and wants to be a Magistrate, to the concise, straight-from-the-shoulder talk of Albert E. Coggin, a curly-haired, twinkling-eyed Assistant City Solicitor of Philadelphia.

But Porter himself was of course the red-hot center of the occasion. When he stood up before the little pried-in affair, hastily decorated with American flags, that did duty as the speakers' stand, the audience rose to its feet and only the McReynolds master of ceremonies and beloved of the independents of the 30th Ward, was sufficient to quiet him.

McReynolds, he it known, is the man who put the war in this ward. When it comes to the revolution and the political disturbances, certain well-known gentlemen of Mexico have nothing on him. Five years ago he slipped quietly into this strongest of Vane strongholds, which was known as the "wets" which even McReynolds couldn't invade, and before the contractor kings of South Philadelphia knew what had happened to them, he was collecting a decided and annoying tendency to think his own thoughts and vote its own votes. The result of Sam's activities was demonstrated in yesterday's election returns, for in this ward, which was known as the "wets," couldn't poll 10 votes, Porter drew down more than 1500.

The "Bloody Pit" doesn't possess an S. R. O. sign. If it had it would have been out long since. The man in the wets has been taken the men lined the walls three deep, and then when there was no more room they crowded the halls and endeavored to catch from the doorway name of the speaker. When all the seats had been taken the men lined the walls three deep, and then when there was no more room they crowded the halls and endeavored to catch from the doorway name of the speaker. When all the seats had been taken the men lined the walls three deep, and then when there was no more room they crowded the halls and endeavored to catch from the doorway name of the speaker.

One thing is certain, the aural appendage of one Thomas D. Smith and his cohorts must have burnt a fiery red as Porter put a few well-meant questions to the absent Organization representatives. And the crowd answered them.

"Are we going to have a ward heeler as Mayor of Philadelphia?"

"No! Loud murmurs of dissent.

"Is Thomas B. Smith a real resident of this city when he has been living at Glenside for a number of years and when he found it necessary to install a telephone in a town house only a few days before the campaign began in order to establish his residence?"

"More loud murmurs.

In a straightforward manner, with no attempt to bombast, Porter then answered the Organization's charges that he himself is not a Philadelphian and not conversant with the traditions of the city.

"True, I was not born here," he said, but all of my ancestors have been Pennsylvanians, and I have been living here for 25 years, and throughout that time I have been interested in the civic affairs of this city, so that I am willing to go on the stand any day with Jim McReynolds and let the public decide which one of us knows more of the political history of this city and State. Furthermore, two of my ancestors have been Governors of Pennsylvania, a Hamilton and a Porter. Can the contractor bosses say as much?"

ENTIRE MAGISTRATE SLATE OF REPUBLICANS NAMED AT PRIMARY

Democrats and Washington Party Contesting for Six Minority Vacancies—Report From Three Wards Missing

OLD GUARD WINS THREE

The Republican Organization magistrature slate of 11 men and the Democratic slate of six men have been nominated without any significant contests. The vote for the Washington party Magistrates, however, brought a number of surprises, and the final outcome will not be known positively until the returns from the full 48 wards are tabulated.

The Republican Organization slate and the vote with three wards missing follows:

Table with 2 columns: Name, Party. Lists names of candidates for magistrates.

The Democrats, who are contesting with the Washington party for the six minority magistrature vacancies, slated only six men, three of whom were named by the "Old Guard" and three by the "Reorganizers." These six were nominated beyond doubt, but who the remaining five candidates on the Democratic ballot will be is still uncertain. On the following table, with five wards missing, the first six men are the slated candidates, and the next highest nine, five of whom will be nominated, are given in order:

The Washington party vote showed the greatest evidence of a free-for-all race, and as a result several of the party's best-known candidates seem to have suffered defeat. Among these are Common Councilman Alexis J. Linsbumer, of the 28th Ward, and Walter J. Littleton, of the 8th Ward. The names of the 15 highest, with five wards missing, are in the following table. The 11 highest will appear on the ballot:

DRIPPS MAY GET POST THAT PORTER VACATED IF HE QUILTS COUNCILS

Independent Floor Leader in City Legislature Expected to Be Named Safety Head by Mayor

COULD HOLD TWO PLACES

Mayor Blankenburg is expected to delay the naming of Robert Dunning Dripps, Common Councilman from the 22d Ward, Director of Public Safety for several days. Dripps, who has rendered valuable service as floor leader for the administration, is the Mayor's choice for the place and the only thing that might interfere with his appointment would be the raising of the old question of naming a Councilman to a city job.

When this question was raised it was pointed out to the Mayor that many of the present members of Councils are holding high-salaried city places and the appointment of Councilman Dripps would place him in no different legal position than that now occupied by others.

There are two other factors which are being considered before Doctor Dripps will be appointed. The first of these is whether or not he can obtain a leave of absence from his position as head of the Public Charities Association until the end of the year. The second is whether it will be legal for him to resign from Councils to accept a county position. A member of the State Legislature is prohibited by law from resigning to accept a State position.

Councilman Dripps is not a candidate to succeed himself and his term of office in Councils would expire with the year.

PORTER GETS OVATION AT MASONIC MEETING

Mayoralty Nominee Praised City's Change Toward Religious Matters

George D. Porter, nominee in the mayoralty contest of this city, was cheered to the echo today when he entered Masonic Fund Hall, Locust street above 8th, to address more than 600 members of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, a negro organization of Masons, which is celebrating the centennial anniversary of its founding in Philadelphia.

It had been expected that Mayor Blankenburg would represent the city in welcoming the delegates to the celebration, but none of those present seemed to be appointed when the ex-Director of Public Safety appeared to represent the Mayor, who, he explained, was confined to his home this morning by a severe cold.

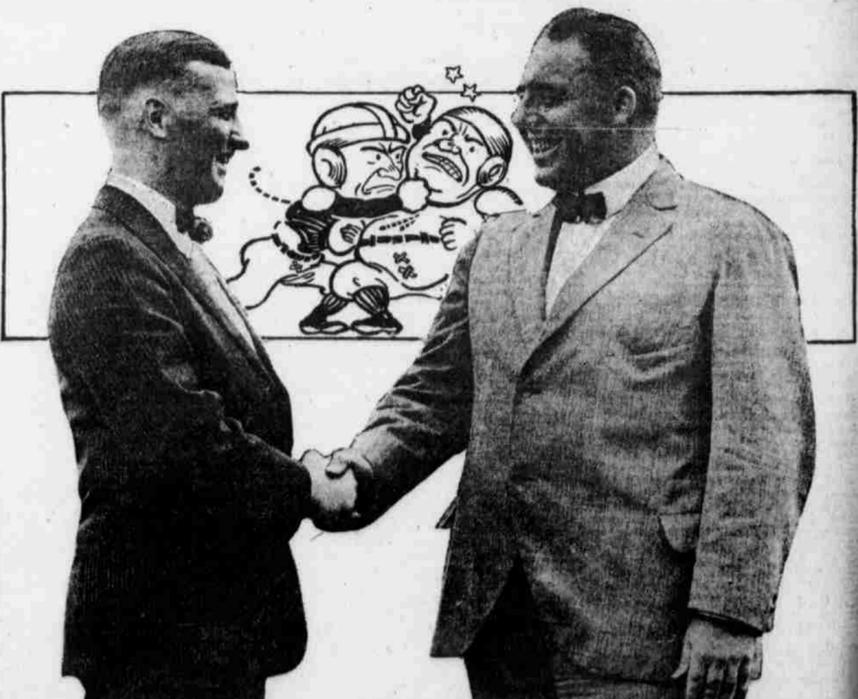

Mr. Porter was introduced by Grand Secretary William H. Miller, and when the storms of applause had quieted down he began an address that moved his hearers to applause at frequent intervals.

Mr. Porter then commented on the changed attitude of this city toward religious matters, and asserted that it was the "most Christian city in the United States." He attributed this to the Terrey and Alexander revival campaign in this city, to the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., to Bible class work and to the "Bible Sunday" campaign.

"Tiny" Maxwell and "Vince" Stevenson Bury the Hatchet!

The Two Big Chiefs Now Smoke the EVENING LEDGER Peace Pipe

In the days when Stevenson was the most famous quarterback Pennsylvania ever had, Maxwell was guard for Swarthmore. The two teams met in their annual game on Franklin Field, and in the course of the tussle Maxwell and Stevenson had a pretty little fist fight. It was, of course, a thing of a moment, for players and officials soon tore them apart. But it did not end there. The men were embittered against each other, and rarely did they meet without renewing the quarrel in some form.

But they have been brought together as co-workers on the Evening Ledger's Sports Page. They have buried the hatchet and peace prevails. The energy they used to put into their famous plays is now centered in the Sports Page of the Evening Ledger. Watch for the Maxwell and Stevenson football articles. They will carry a message to every football fan.
